THE REPUBLICAN OUTLOOK IN INDIANA.

THE STATE SOLE FOR GARFIELD

WASHINGTON, June 29, 1880.—Hon. John C. New, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Indiana, now here, says there has been a thorough canvass of the state, and that a complete list of the doubtful voters in every county has been made. These voters have been supplied with campaign documents best calculated to place the Republican party in the most favorable light, and the Republicans will carry Indiana, Mr. New has no doubt. He says Hancock adds no strength to the ticket and that the party cannot avoid its previous record. The fact that Garfield was a volunteer and Hancock is a West Pointer, will, Mr. New thinks, also have considerable effect upon the soldier element. Mr. English, Mr. New says, is very unpopular in Indiana, and most of the leading Indiana Democrats would have been more popular. Mr. New says that the Republican ticket is more popular than any that has been nominated in the state for twenty years.

ANOTHER STEAMER SUNK.

A COLLISION IN EAST RIVER.

PROBABLY NO LIVES LOST.

NEW YORK, June 29.—10 A. M.—Another steamboat disaster occurred in East River this morning, before the full horrors of the Seawanhaka calamity of last night have yet been learned. This morning the steamer Long Branch left a Brooklyn pier at nine o'clock, for an excursion trip, having on board over two thousand people, members and friends of the Hanson-place Baptist Church Sunday School, Brooklyn.

When it reached the middle of the stream it was run into by a tug-boat, with terrific force. Almost the entire bow of the Long Branch was torn out. The boat was turned into the Catherine slip on the New York side, and the passengers are now being taken off. It is hoped that no lives have been lost, and it is believed that all on board have been saved by this hour and safely transferred to the shore. The Long Branch is sinking slowly. The scenes on board at the time of the collision are described as terrible in the extreme.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

The Long Branch at the time of the collision had on board about 400 persons, mostly women and children, members of the Hanson Place Baptist Church, Brooklyn, bound to Oceanus Island, up the Hudson, on their annual excursion. She had hardly left the pier, foot of Fulton street, when she struck a hawser connecting the tug Baylight, not Hope as first reported, and a scow in tow. The Long Branch swung round and came in collision with the scow. A large hole was knocked in her bow, but the collision bulkhead prevented her from sinking, and she was enabled to land the passengers in safety.

THE FENIANS IN COUNCIL.

"NOT A CENT FOR BLATHERSKITE, BUT EVERY DOLLAR FOR DYNAMITE."

LET ENGLAND TREMBLE

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—The Fenian movement is to be revived if a convention which began its sessions in this city yesterday is in earnest, as it seems to be. It comprises delegates from every state in the Union, who came in answer to a call for the organization of "a National Association to deliver Ireland from English rule." A president, secretary and other officers were elected, and a name, "The United Irishmen of America," was chosen. One member, James McDermott, of Brooklyn, said he had crossed the ocean eighteen times "in the interests of the Fenian movement that amounted to nothing," and said this present movement had for its motto:

No a cent for blatherskite,
but every dollar for dynamite.

Every delegate, he explained, comes paying his own expenses—not a penny is furnished by an organization. "We don't mean," said he further, "to meet England on the open battlefield; that would be folly; but we do intend to carry on a warfare on the principle of Nihilism, and we propose to establish a fund at this convention for that purpose. We don't believe in Communism or the equalization of property—let those who till the soil reap the benefits. What we want to do is to free Ireland from the cruel yoke of British oppression."

RUSSIA.

DAMAGE TO THE CROPS.—RAVAGES OF LOCUSTS AND OTHER INSECTS.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 29. The Minister of the Interior, who is on a tour of inspection, telegraphs from Astrakan that, owing to the want of hands, the plague of locusts cannot be effectually eradicated. Many other insects are injuring the crops. A dispatch from Kamensk reports locusts in the Vaden Steppes of the Don. The wheat crop is regarded as lost. Complaints of the ravages of insects are universal throughout the country.

CREVASSE IN THE MISSISSIPPI.

18,000 ACRES OF LAND OVERFLOWED.—THE CROPS DAMAGED.

ST. LOUIS, June 25.—A special from Warsaw, Ill., says the levee which protects the bottom lands in this county broke last night and the water is pouring through a crevasse 200 feet wide. All the wheat and corn and other crops will be blasted and 18,000 acres of land overflowed. The people are now engaged in getting their live stock off the bottom lands.

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

A FOUR YEAR-OLD BOY SHOOTS HIS SISTER, AGED TWO, DEAD WITH A REVOLVER.

DES MOINES, Iowa, June 29.—The four-year old son of George Wheeler, living near here, yesterday shot his sister, aged two years, dead with a revolver.

Mr. Livingston's team of sixteen handsome horses, which he has been in the habit of driving in Florence, attached to a London drag, ran away recently through the narrow and greatly crowded streets. The city fathers have resolved to limit in the future the number of Mr. Livingston's horses.

CHINA VS RUSSIA.

THE WAR GOES ON, AND THE CHINESE WIN A VICTORY.

LONDON, June 29.—A despatch to the Times from Cabul confirms the rumor that the Chinese had defeated the Russians at the Tork Pass. The despatch further states that the retiring Russians were followed by the victorious Chinese and again defeated at Sigel Kurghan, losing their supplies and ammunition, which fell into the hands of the Chinese. The latter then pressed on with the fruits of their victory and reached Gulbscha in safety. Tork, or Terek Pass, at which the engagement took place is on a river of the same name in southern Russia, north of the northern frontier of Turkestan. The river enters the sea by several mouths.

Gulbscha is a walled Chinese city in Soungaria, the capital of a district of the same name and is sometimes called Kelce. It contains barracks for troops and the public offices of the Government. The intelligence of the engagement came from Cabul by way of Bokhara and Herat and is considered trustworthy.

THE GREAT RIFLE MATCH.

The American Team Victorious.

MR. FARROW, OF NEWPORT, ONE OF THE BEST SHOTS.

Festivities and Congratulations After the Match.

BOLTON MOOR, June 29.—The firing at the 800 yards range commenced at 12:30 P. M. The wind has moderated, and the conditions are more favorable. In the first round at 800 yards range the total scores are as follows:

American 136 out of a possible 150.
Irish 136, being a tie.

AT 900 YARDS

The total scores at the 900 yards range were:

AMERICANS.

Clark, 25; Scott, 29; Fisher, 23; Rathbone, 25; Farrow, 21; Brown, 24; grand total, 136.

IRISH.

John Rigby, 32; Wm. Rigby, 31; Milner, 30; Pennton, 30; Joynt, 31; Young, 31; grand total, 128.

AT 1000 YARDS.

The total at the one thousand yards range is as follows:

AMERICANS.

Clarke, 34; Scott, 34; Fisher, 39; Rathbone, 36; Farrow, 29; Brown, 37. Grand total, 120.

IRISH.

John Rigby, 38; Wm. Rigby, 38; Milner, 37; Pennton, 32; Joynt, 32; Young, 29; Grand total, 146.

GRAND TOTALS.

The correct grand totals are: Americans, 2582; Irish, 2590.

The match was finished at 6:20 o'clock, at the completion of the 9th round, at the 1000 yards range. The Americans were nine shots ahead on all shots then fired. At 6 o'clock the smoke from the grass in the neighborhood which had been fired, became so dense that the firing was suspended for a few minutes.

AFTER THE CONTEST.

When the match was won, cheers were given for the American and Irish teams. Col. Bodine was presented with a bouquet by the ladies. Acknowledging the compliment paid himself and the team, Col. Bodine said it afforded him pleasure, as captain of the American team, that they had won, but as a representative rifleman he felt regret at the result, from the sense that the riflemen of Ireland richly deserved victory this time, because of their exertions to secure victory, and he was sure the feelings he expressed were the feelings of the American people. Cheers were given for Earl Cowper, who made a short speech. He declared that he never expected to see such scoring. He was glad the Irish team took the defeat so good-humoredly.

PAINTED FLOORS

If you have a painted floor keep soap and suspenders off of it, for it spoils the brightness of the paint, makes it soft, and then it peels off, leaving the floor looking worse then if it had not been painted. If your floor has not been painted, keep soap off of it, for it gives it a dirty, grimy look, and keeps growing worse all the time. Just take clean hot water, put a teaspoonful of spirits of mumonia into a three-gallon pail of water, stir it, and with a clean, long-handled mop rub the floor all over, then wipe it off with clean water. It will take a little while to get the gray out of the boards, but it will come out after a time, and you will find it far easier to keep your floor white and nice than it was when cleaned with soap or suds.—[Woman's Journal.

A Waterbury, Conn., officer called at a house the other day and asked if the family had any dogs to be registered. "No, sir," was the prompt reply. He thereupon imitated a dog's bark so effectively that he started up three dogs that were in the cellar thus disclosing their whereabouts.

.....It seems to be generally understood in England that George Eliot will not write any more novels or anything else. She has, it is said, definitely announced her determination to retire from the pursuit of literature altogether. She has often said that Mr. Lewes was a special stimulus to her, and that she could not have done "Middlemarch" or "Daniel Deronda" without his encouragement. Since his death she feels her incentive and inspiring gone, and, as she has long been in delicate health, she considers her literary career over.

.....It is related of Hon. Hancock that on the 12th of June, 1863, at Spottsylvania, he captured twenty pieces of artillery and five thousand prisoners. Among the latter were General Edward Johnson and General Geo. H. Stewart. When General Stewart was brought in, Hancock, who had been an old army friend, held out his hand and said, "Stewart, I am glad to see you." But Stewart drew back and replied, "Under the circumstances, sir, I cannot take your hand." "And under any other circumstances," said Hancock, "I would not have offered you my hand."

A WOMAN'S STATEMENT.

IN REGARD TO THE COWARDICE OF THE CAPTAIN AND CREW OF THE NARRAGANSETT.

Rev. Mr. Harwood:

DEAR SIR: I have just been reading an account of your sermon of Sunday evening. I was one of the passengers of the Narragansett, and was one of the last to leave the boat; so I am supposed to know something about it. The sermon that you preached on Sabbath evening no prophet could have told the picture as plain as you did from first to last. There were no officers on board the boat when I left, nor did I see any after the collision. It looked as though they knew the back door and went out that way.

A great many of the life preservers were out of order; the one I had on had no strings to tie it on. A young man from Philadelphia that I never saw before, Cathcart by name, stood by us and helped us all he could till the boat I was in tipped over and we were thrown into the water.

I'm the gray-haired woman that saved her grandchild. When I was in the water I looked up at the burning boat, and I saw a colored man, the last on the boat. The white men were all gone. Then a boat came towards me, and a woman in the boat asked me if that was my baby. I said no, it was my grandchild, "save it." A woman, not a man, took the child in, and took me by the left arm and dragged me after the boat until we came to the City of New York. There were no oars in that boat, only pieces of boards. Then I was taken in the small boat to the large one. If a man got out to let me in, I never saw him. The passengers on board the City of New York did everything they could for me. Now, my daughter was the one that asked the man on the bale of cotton to save her child, and he said he would try and save her child, but he couldn't save the mother, but he held on to the rope that held the bale together until the three were taken on board the Stonington. I was taken to New York, thinking she was dead, and she thought that I was. When she was taken up she was more dead than alive, thinking she had lost her mother and baby. A Sister of Charity came and put her arm around her neck as loving as could be, and said: "My dear girl, are you a Catholic?" and she said, "No." Then she took her arm away and left her to die, if there were none to help. Two young ladies came to her, and one of them said: "Come into my bed; I have just got up and my bed is warm." They rubbed her and took care of her. They didn't stop to ask about her religion. Which of the two was the good Samaritan? I was disabled by having my ankle sprained, and have been going on crutches ever since. Let the people judge whether the captain and crew did their duty. I affirm what I say.

BATHING DRESSES.

Buying a bathing dress is easy work compared to the task of selecting any other ready-made suit, for it is not necessary to enter the shop in which they are sold with a long list of measurements and to examine fifty or sixty different gowns before deciding which one contains the fewest departures from the model upon which one has decided. There is no question as to whether one can endure leaving the train six inches too short in thankfulness for not having the sleeve fall below one's finger tips, or whether one will not grumble about having to take in all the waist seams, inasmuch as the button-holes are tolerably worked. One takes the bathing suit as one finds it, asking no questions, and secure in the perfect confidence of looking ugly in it when one comes out of water.

There will not be a great deal of doubt as to how one does look in the French suits, for there is so little of them that they do not leave much to be taken on faith. All of them are short-sleeved, and the lovely young creatures who expose their ulna and radii, and eke their humeri and very nearly all their scapulæ when in evening dress, will perforce display them veiled by cuticle of red and brown shading, if they bathe in one of these suits in the morning. It is true that the color may be an improvement on the cool blue of the goosefish which they generally exhibit, but it will not be pleasing to them, and before the season is half over they will lament their folly, and envy the lucky girls whose bones are well covered with flesh and whose flesh is covered by skin as tough as that of Chrysosis. These latter damsels will wear the short sleeved bathing dress in perfect contentment, and very beautiful they will look as they splash about in the waves, and even in the trying minute when they stand on the shore, waiting to be wrapped up for the little walk to the bathing house.

As a rule, it will be an error of white or unbleached Turkish towelling that will be hung about them; but if they be sure of their ability to produce classic folds without the aid of a looking glass, and possibly in the face of a driving wind, they can try the effect of one of the immense white towels, two yards wide, and, wrapped in one of them, may pace as gracefully as may be to their bathing house. The circular cloak will not be much used this year, but, if worn at all, it should be bound and piped with color, like the sleeves. The bathing shoes are of canvas, with the double canvas sole, which is so much lighter and easier than rope, and which protects the foot perfectly. The caps worn are either the plain oilcloth bag which protects the hair perfectly or the jaunty Breton caps of opaque silk, finished with box plaitings of bright braid, or of silk bound with braid.

No French woman ever considers her bathing suit complete without a cap, but this year it is set back from the face, and crimps and curls stray below it in a style which is lovely in picture and suggests a touching confidence in Father Neptune's gallantry. The stale of those crimps after one's assault from a tenth wave is one of those things which the mind refuses to contemplate; but, in spite of their short sleeves, one cannot help admiring the suits. The simplest are of dark-blue serge, with a rather shallow yoke, and a box plaiting of a scarlet braid extending down the opening of the front and around the neck and sleeves; but some of the suits have tunics that are fastened with two buttons at the waist, and simulate coats opening over striped waistcoats.

Others, again, have Breton vests, and some have square-cut openings, with chemisettes striped with braid and little rosettes of black braid taking the place of a lampred. Some have huge stars on the lapels and collar of the tunic and on the sleeves and trousers, and some have anchors in the same places, and one pattern opens diagonally and has an anchor wrought in scarlet braid on the left shoulder; but the prettiest of all suits are of blue trimmed with old-gold braid, and enough pearl buttons to equip Dora's page boy.—[Boston Transcript.

THE DRY FOR RAIN.

BY CHARLES G. GREENE.

O for the coming of rain
Sighing as sighed the pine,
Why does it hold back?
Taking no free?
Of all our moan?
The fainting earth
Through the search
To weary heart,
Life her glad edge
Towards the sky
Imploringly.

The trees creep
Down to the deep
Tangled and blue,
As I catch a glimpse
Brown and dead
On its dusty bed
Like the grass;
All the grass
As the wind sears
On the trees.

High overhead
Hangs the sun like a bird,
Drinking to his bed
Like restless fire;
And the moan
Born was and wake,
But brings no rain,
Tell our distress
Or can a prayer?
Fills the air.

O bless of rain
Come again!
Or back to Christ
Or bring us home
With his footsteps lead,
Two in front the two!
The promised rain.

SOUTH BERWICK FALLS, June, 1880.

BIOGRAPHY OF GEN. HANCOCK.

General Hancock, the subject of this memoir, was born. He was, also, like other boys of his time, young at an early age. His father was a man. At the battle of Bunker Hill he behaved with great gallantry and was the first to enter the English works at the head of his troops, crying, "I know not what others may ask, but as for me, give me liberty or give me a pension." The English thereupon gave him his liberty and a pension, whereupon he went to Boston and signed the Declaration of Independence in a firm, bold hand. It was then that his grandfather, John Hancock, remarked to him, "Winfield, we'll win if we hang together." At the close of the Revolution young Winfield enlisted in the War of 1812. He formed Washington to prevent its falling into the hands of the English, taught a school out West, drove a horse on a canal towpath, cooked his own victuals, earned his own money, sent himself to school and was educated by his mother. W. H. Tweed at this time said of him: "That boy will make a man yet if he grows up, and he will certainly become a man before his mother." And Hancock did. General Hancock, however, steadily refused to receive any commissions from the Tweed Ring, but like Cincinnatus, retired to a humble log cottage at North Bend, Ind., where he subsisted mainly on corn and hard cider, and always kept his latch string hanging out. His subsequent services are too well known to need narration here. He is a man of whom it may truly be said that he is sans peur et sans reproch. He can read and write. He never told a lie, although he has been known to cut down an orchard full of apple trees before breakfast. Standing six feet two in his stockings, he can take a keg of beer by the teeth and keep it there any length of time, and his performance on the flying trapeze is the wonder and admiration of his brother officers. If properly elected, adjusted and posed he will form the finest ornament to the White House since the days of Martin Van Buren. Our readers are assured that there is as yet no biography of General Hancock like this out, and concerning its genuineness there can be no doubt.—[Graphic.

A WONDERFUL LAKE.

Tulare Lake is probably the most mysterious spot on the continent. It is located on a great plain three hundred miles south of San Francisco. At a distance the water appears to be higher than the land. A mile or more before reaching the water the dry land of the plain gives place to damp soil, and when at last the margin of the lake is found one may wade into it for more than a mile before finding it knee deep. The lake is about forty miles long. The bottom is formed of clam shells, and there are hundreds of small islands and hummocks of tules. The islands are tenanted by millions of white birds of the gull kind, and upon one of them fourteen human skulls ranged in a circle were lately found, no other bones lying near. Mounds have been discovered along the shore, and it is expected that the whole bottom of the lake will reveal traces of a submerged city.

Great tribulation is reported among the ladies at the Ascot races this year. The arrangement of "the Ascot toilet" is described as one of the most important events in the feminine year, and the month before the races is the busiest of the whole season for the English dressmakers. The beautiful dresses had been designed, ordered, and in many cases even sent home, says the London Saturday Review, when the death of the Empress of Russia, within a week of the races, spread consternation among the ladies. It was known that an order for a court mourning would but too surely follow the sad event, and therefore all ladies who were privileged to enter the royal enclosure would be obliged to deny themselves the pleasure of wearing the colored dresses which had been specially made for the occasion. It might be supposed that by far the larger number of the ladies who attend Ascot races are not invited to the royal enclosure, and that consequently they would be at full liberty to wear any colors they pleased. This undoubtedly is true; but as the fact of appearing in colored costumes would have betokened that the wearers were not possessed of tickets for the royal enclosure, most ladies preferred to sacrifice their fancy rather than to be suspected of being excluded from the hallowed precincts.

Governor's Island, where General Hancock resides in the summer time, is besieged with mosquitoes. If he can stand the attacks of those pests he need fear nothing from political stump speakers.

MRS HANCOCK.

Mrs. Hancock, the wife of the General, is a few years his junior in age and is a woman as imposing in appearance as he is a man. Tall and well proportioned, with a most winsome smile, a manner that tells you at once at once and is pair of eyes that animate every line of a handsome face, she is still a beauty, although her hair is becoming streaked with gray. She was married when the General was but a young lieutenant doing duty in the far West. It was entirely a love match, and neither of them have since regretted it—in fact, their home is one of the happiest imaginable. Mrs. Hancock has always been opposed to her husband's becoming a candidate for the Presidency, and she is even above the weakness of wishing to be the mistress of the White House. She dreads the worry of the canvass, and if her husband is elected she thinks that the honor which the position brings will be clearly purchased by the renunciation of all domestic life for four years to come, and of his position as senior Major-General and chances of soon becoming chief of the army. While she prefers her own home existence, however, there is no one better qualified to play the hostess on a grand scale than she. A society belle even after her marriage, she has all the self-confidence and resources needed to entertain the most varied company. There is nothing in the range of conversation about which she does not know something. Her greatest charm, however, is—and it is the General's also—the art of making every individual she feels and talks as were he the sole object of her attentions.

The incomplete returns of the census enumerators in Colorado show a very large increase in population to that state during the past ten years. The population of Denver alone is about 35,000 or only 15,000 less than that of the entire state in 1870. The returns of ten days make the population of the state 194,954, and when the entire census has been compiled the figures will probably be much larger. Ten days' returns give Leadville a population of 8,027; Colorado Springs follows with 3,251; Silver Cliff has 2,588; Central City, 2,117; Georgetown, 2,121, and Boulder, 1,826. All these figures are necessarily incomplete, but these in bonds what the past few years have done for Colorado mining towns in the way of populating them.

Into a life some rain must fall, some days must be dark and dreary. But many a weary, despondent sufferer can dispel the clouds by the use of Hop's Bay, Rock and Rye Bitters. It is the healing balm of the age. For sale by CHAMPLIN, TEW & CO., Newport, R. I. 1y15 2m

The counterfeiters are busy, and the public is cautioned to look out for counterfeit $100 notes on the National Revere Bank of Boston, Pittsburg National Bank, Mechanics' National Bank of New Bedford, Pittsfield National Bank of Pittsfield, Mass., and National Exchange Bank of Baltimore.

The Democracy are not so confident of electing their ticket as they were on the day after its nomination. There is every indication that in this canvass, as in that of 1872 and that of 1876, the Democratic candidates will grow weaker with the lapse of time and the Republican candidates stronger.

The nomination of Hancock and English, though a good one, awakens no enthusiasm. Reports from various parts of the country lead one to conclude that the "boom" of the Cincinnati Convention has already begun to subside. When sensible men come to compare the qualifications of the soldier with those of the statesman-soldier for President, they will see that Gen. Hancock is not so strong a man for 1880 as would be Bayard or Thurman.

The Boston Transcript calls for a change in the law which exempts steamboat companies from the liability of common carriers. They are common carriers, in fact, though not in law, and the idea that their liability should be limited to the value of their freight money and the wreck is absurd. Let steamboat companies be put upon the same footing as railroad companies and other common carriers. If this necessitates an increase in passenger and freight rates, the public will pay it without complaint.

The attempt to make capital against Gen. Hancock out of the Surrat hanging is not likely to succeed. That Gen. Hancock believed Mrs. Surrat guilty there can be no doubt or he would not have proceeded so resolutely, and refused so persistently to render her any assistance. It is true that it is not generally believed that the woman was not guilty and ought not to have been hung. But Andrew Johnson and General Hancock felt then that the popular demand was for a victim and so they offered her up instead of giving Jeff Davis and his associates their due on the gallows. That Hancock made a mistake is very likely, but it should not be laid up against him.

The Graphic speaks of Monday last as a day full of horrors and enumerates as follows: First, the steamer Clyde caught fire, and several of her crew had a narrow escape from death. Next, there was a benzine explosion in Gold street, by which two men were badly burned. Then a Western merchant, while on his way to Coney Island, was killed on the Elevated road. Twenty-eight persons died from the effects of the heat, and many more were prostrated. A yacht capsized in the East river, and at least one man is supposed to have been drowned. The last chapter in this eventful and terrible day was the burning of the steamer Seawanhaka, and the loss of fifty lives or more. If things continue for the remainder of the summer as they have been, next year there will be neither facilities left to kill people nor people to kill.

Many of our older citizens will remember the Rev. Samuel Norris, who was a pastor in Newport many years ago and who for a long time has been accustomed to make an annual visit to his old friends and parishioners in this city. His death is now reported as having occurred in South Newmarket, N. H., June 23, in the 80th year of his age. Mr. Norris was born in Dorchester, N. H., and became a Methodist preacher at an early age, joining the New Hampshire Conference in 1818. On account of loss of hearing, he became superannuated more than 30 years since, and has resided most of that time with his son, John B. Norris, Esq., in Brooklyn, N. Y. After his son's death, some two years since, he returned to New Hampshire, and has made his home in South Newmarket. He was a man of remarkable geniality, and was widely known and greatly respected and loved. He leaves a wife, daughter of the late Rev. and Hon. John Brodhead.

When the census is over comes the tug of war among the managing politicians. Congress will decide how many representatives each state is entitled to send to its lower house, and the Legislature of any state provides for the work of reshaping its districts, under the restriction of the national constitution, that each district must contain at least 30,000 inhabitants. This local power, for party reasons, may run lines in an arbitrary way and create districts varying widely in party strength. "Gerrymandering," the name given this practice, had its origin in Massachusetts, when the districts were being rearranged, after the census of 1810, under Gov. Gerry, a Democrat. To keep the federalists from gaining a Congressman, one northeastern district was curiously carved in the shape of a bird, and a cartoon, first printed in the Salem Gazette, gave wide currency to the new term of political reproach.

The business of the country is still prosperous, and the prospect at one time thought to be gloomy is rapidly improving. The exports of the country's products continue to be immense, increasing the big figures of last year and exceeding even the increased imports. 10,000 bales of cotton were sent out from New York last week, against 1400 in the corresponding week of last year, and 2,007,311 bushels of wheat against 1,243,000 the corresponding week of last year. In the past four weeks the total of exports has been $40,000,000 against $27,000,000 last year, while the imports have been $36,285,000 against $20,817,671 last year. A flow of gold from Europe to America again is the next thing in order. It is true the excess of exports over imports for the twelve months ending June 30 will be only about $100,000,000 against the $240,000,000 last year; but we have no longer the public bonds in Europe that we had, $200,000,000 worth having been paid off last year, and the gold coin—not bonds—has got to come to settle the balance due us.

WHERE IS THE RESPONSIBILITY?

That the heavy loss by fire yesterday was the result of inefficiency and want of preparation for an emergency is apparent to all acquainted with the facts of the case. The property burned, together with all other property in the city, has been paying taxes for many years to ensure protection, as far as is in the power of the city to grant it, against destruction by fire. The city has taken the money of its inhabitants for this purpose, has purchased and equipped fire engines, and has employed and paid men to manage them; has built costly and showy engine houses, has maintained a fire alarm telegraph; and has built reservoirs for the supply of water. For all this the citizens have paid cheerfully as was their duty.

And now comes a fire. The alarm is attempted to be given and the fire alarm telegraph is out of order and but half does its work. The defect, it is conceded, has been known to exist for some time, but has not been remedied. Such firemen as get the word haste with their engines to the spot, and there is no water in the vicinity. They hunt up a reservoir some 1500 or 1800 feet distant and find that their hose will not reach. They send for more hose and wait as anxious spectators until it arrives. It comes at last, but the distance is so great that the work can be done only at a fatal disadvantage. In the meantime the fine dwelling house with its costly furniture whose owners have been paying the city for protection these many years, is burning up. Ten, fifteen, twenty, twenty-five, thirty minutes, even, pass after the public alarm before a stream of water is turned on. The officers and men of the department do the best they can under the circumstances, but to require them to put out fires with these conditions existing is altogether absurd.

The responsibility for this condition of affairs rests somewhere. In other words somebody is to blame, and that responsibility ought to be fixed and applied as much as it should be in the case of the burning Narragansett or the colliding trains at Wollaston. We cannot afford to suffer these consequences without knowing the reasons therefor. The city has undertaken to protect our property from fire and having taken pay for the same is under moral and legal obligations to use all reasonable diligence and care. We do not hesitate to say that such diligence and care has not been exercised in this case, and that from the neglect great loss to individuals has ensued.

So much for the relation sustained by the city to this unfortunate affair. But the blame does not rest alone upon its representatives. The manner in which the fire originated comes but little short of being criminal. We have not inquired and do not know who is the party that left oiled and waxed rags in the hallway. No man of ordinary intelligence exists who does not know that fire is apt to come from such a source. No man who is a painter, certainly, ought to be ignorant on this point. This is the third time within a few years where fire has caused, in this city, from the same cause. And yet a careless workman leaves a house entrusted for the time to his care, with a tinder box on fire, or ready to become on fire during the night. Again we ask, Where is the responsibility?

THE PROCESSION FOR THE FOURTH.

The route of march for the procession on Monday will be as follows: The line will form on Broadway near the State House, at 10 o'clock, and will move up Broadway to Equality Park, countermarch to Marlboro, down Marlboro to Thames, up Thames to Poplar, down Poplar to Washington, down Washington to Bridge, up Bridge to Thames, down Thames to Dearborn, up Dearborn to Spring, up Spring and Broadway to Ayrault up Ayrault to Kay, through Kay to Bellevue avenue and Touro Park, where the exercises of the day will take place.

A LARGE ENTERPRISE.

Few people have a correct idea of the amount of business done in this city by the Newport Omnibus company on the several advertised lines, or the large number of men, horses and wagons used and of the work of superintending so large a business. It is but a few years since the first feeble attempt to run any omnibus regularly over an advertised route was made in the city and it remained for Mr. Burton to start the business and to bring it to its present proportions by his indomitable energy and great industry. The first omnibus started was run on Broadway and at wide intervals of time. As fast as there seemed to be a demand for new lines to be opened or for stages to run with more frequency upon any of the routes already established, the increased accommodations have been afforded till at the present time there are used on the six lines of omnibus company and Burton's express, the two companies being under the same control, practically, over fifty horses, forty men, and thirty wagons of different kinds. The expense of keeping so large a force at work would have appalled the friends of the enterprise in its infancy, and has only been warranted by the constant increase in the patronage of the lines. The stages of the Newport Omnibus Company are used by all the resident and transient people and their presence has become to be a necessity in our midst.

A GROWING EVIL.

To the Editor of the Daily News:

The writer would be glad to know what good reason exists for putting fine bound books on the market, with uncut leaves. So far as he has observed the custom seems to be chiefly English. Within a few days he bought a $2.50 book of Appleton & Co, a handsome well bound book published in London, but the leaves were uncut. Several years ago he bought another English book at a cost of five or six dollars. This was most elegantly bound, printed on fine paper and fully illustrated, the tops of the leaves were gilt, but the whole was uncut, just as it came from the folder's hands.

It is easy to understand why a cheap paper, bound novel, or a monthly magazine, should be sold uncut, but why a book that purports to be a complete and handsome thing should be left unfinished, is not so evident. Aside from the labor of cutting a book of 500 pages, it is impossible to do it with an ordinary paper cutter or knife without damaging the books.

Respectfully yours,

NEWPORT, R. I., June 29, 1880.

LITTLE COMPTON.

Dr. Geo. F. S. White of Andersonville, the well known physician and druggist, who has been incapacitated for work for several months past by reason of severe illness, is now able to leave his home and is in a fair way of recovery.

TRAINING SHIPS.

The following extracts are from a letter addressed to Senator Anthony, by an accomplished and distinguished naval officer, who has given special attention to the training schools of this and other countries, and has made valuable suggestions to the Department in respect to them. Although not written for publication, they are so interesting that we place them before our readers:

At present we have four training ships, all, with the exception of the Minnesota, cruising.

The allowance of boys received amounts to 750 a year. These are recruited by all the ships and all act independently of one another.

The Bureau of Equipment has long recognized the necessity of putting the system on some other base than this, by recruiting the boys at some central station, and passing them through a fixed course of training at this station before sending them to cruising ships. The effort now, as I understand, is to decide upon the point where this station shall be established. To my own mind, there is one point perfectly fitted, and only one, and this is Narragansett bay.

The Minnesota was sent last winter to New London, temporarily, and strong efforts are now making to establish the depot there, it being urged that the government already owns desirable property there. It only requires a slight study of the chart to show how far the Thames and neighboring waters fall short of the requirements. The river is much too narrow at the Navy Yard, for exercises with the small exercising vessels which must be attached to the station. They must go four miles to get into the Sound, and when there they are in the midst of very powerful tides and currents, which would make it necessary to select special times for going out. There is no place for gunnery practice. It cannot be carried on in the river, and, even in the Sound, the traffic is too great to enable gunpractice to be carried on without danger, and a good gunnery school is an absolute necessity.

Finally, the climate of the Thames is much colder and more severe than that of Narragansett Bay, rendering winter exercises impracticable. This I know from my experience in the apprentice ship Sabine, while lying off New London.

The authorities of Rhode Island and of Newport have always shown themselves, heretofore, willing to do much for the establishment of such a station in their midst, and I suppose they are still of the same mind. The two most desirable points, I suppose, are Coasters Harbor Island and Gould Island. The former was once offered by the city of Newport as a site for the Naval Academy, and the latter, within a very few years, has been offered at a very moderate price to a private purchaser. Prudence Island is rather too far away; it is too large; it is desirable too, that the station should be within easy reach of the Torpedo Station, where, of course, torpedo instruction would be given some of the men. It is, also, so far from town as to make the giving of liberty, the transportation of supplies, &c., expensive. Besides these things, the climate of Prudence is more severe than that of either of the other islands. Nothing has yet been done towards seeing what could be given in the bay. If the government could obtain the land without cost, we should at once be on an equal footing, as regards that part of the question, with New London, and the advantages otherwise are so immense that there could be no doubt thereafter which of the two points should be selected.

I have not mentioned the wishes of some in regard to the Chesapeake, but the disadvantages of taking such an establishment from the midst of the seafaring population, and placing it in a part of the country whence scarcely any recruits can be drawn, are enough alone, without regard to the drawbacks of an unhealthy summer climate, in which it would be injurious to put young boys through a severe discipline and drill. Even at Norfolk we ship very few men, and these of a very inferior class.

Newport has the warmest climate in winter north of Richmond. The average winter temperature is higher than that of Washington. (This I have had from Dr. Craig, of Washington.) Were this not so, a station somewhere on Long Island Sound might be almost as desirable if such an expanse of water as Narragansett Bay could be found, but a change of either forty or fifty miles to the westward shows a very great thermometric difference.

As to the kind of station contemplated by the Bureau of Equipment. It would include the stationing of two or three large ships at the point. The erection possibly of some barracks, ashore, for a portion of the recruits, and some other buildings, as a hospital, &c., the building of some good wharves, and the adaptation of a certain amount of the grounds to the purposes of drill grounds. All this, of course, would require some money, but is there any less reason for the general government spending money upon the education of those in its service, than there is that the various states should expend such vast sums upon the education of children within their borders. The city of New York expended last year nearly $1,000,000, and while, as states, we do so much in the way of general education, we are deficient in technical schools of every kind; instead of being in advance of other powers, we are far behind. Austria has more than eighty free technical schools, apart from her schools for the army and navy. Every European Government is in advance of ourselves regarding the last-named, excepting Spain, Portugal and Greece. I think any one must be surprised as he comes to know the vast and extended systems of training boys abroad. England keeps under training, at all times, about 3000, supplying in this way all the seamen of her fleet, and turning out a class of men who are an honor to her system and foresight. These men are gradually giving a tone to certain classes of English society. After twenty years service they may receive a small pension and generally, at the age of 38, they seek employment out of the service. They carry with them the discipline and training they have acquired, and they now form, in civil life, a large and constantly increasing body of men of the best habits and character. England expends on this training over $500,000 a year; the expenditure of France is nearly as much. Germany, Italy, Holland and others have systems quite as elaborate. We are the only great power which has heretofore seemed to consider the education of these men unnecessary. It is, it seems to me, due to our own self respect to do more than we have done.

I fear I am making my letter rather longer than your patience, but I am deeply interested in all this, and I have wished to try and give you an outline of what we desire to do, and of what has been done abroad. I think what I have said is in consonance with the designs of the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting.—[Prov. Journal.

A COLLEGE JOKE.—Yesterday afternoon, during the class-day exercises at the gymnasium, a strapping great fellow who drives a beer wagon drove up to the door, and shouldering a keg marched up and placed it on the rostrum, to the intense horror and amusement of the gaily-decked seniors and the grave and spectacled faculty. The consternation was so great, that it came near breaking up the proceedings. It seems that a party of practical jokers among the lower class men had ordered the keg to be thus delivered, the innocent brewery man being informed that the select assemblage in the gymnasium was a turning festival. It was one of the most successful college jokes ever perpetrated at the state University.—[Wisconsin State Journal.

Mr. English's barred room will probably figure in the canvass and furnish material for many a pointed cartoon. Mr. English's sleeping room at his residence on the Circle, when he was president of the First National Bank, looked more like a prison than a room in a private residence in the heart of a populous city. The doors and windows were barred with iron, Mr. English locking himself in when he retired at night to prevent bank robbers from coming to his residence and carrying him off. He was particularly fearful during the strike of the workingmen in 1877, and always retired at an early hour, carefully locking himself in.—[Indianapolis Journal.

President Hayes, while at Branford, Conn., made a short address to the people. He said his ancestors had lived in the town 100 years ago, perhaps as far back as 200 years, when John Russell settled there. One of his sons was Samuel Russell, who preached to the people of Branford about forty years. His daughter, Rebecca Hayes, married Ezekiel Hayes. He did not desire to speak on political subjects. There might be some present who would disagree with his views, but the underlying principles of all their beliefs were probably the same. Samuel Russell preached to a God-fearing people, that is, they loved what was right and shunned what was wrong. Upon this interpretation of the phrase God fearing, all could unite. Speeches were made by all residents of the town, distant relatives of the President, and an old scythe, found in the possession of one of the old residents, made by Ezekiel Hayes, his great-grandfather, was presented to the President. He dined at the Tolcket House. In New Haven he attended the Yale-Harvard base-ball match, arriving at the fifth inning. In the evening a reception was tendered him at the residence of Thomas R. Trowbridge, which was attended by an immense throng.

GLEANINGS AND GOSSIP.

Public libraries are springing up in France.

A shark weighing 800 pounds was caught on the Florida coast last week.

Seven thousand five hundred and eighty-one immigrants arrived at New York last week.

The possibility of supplying New York with cheap artificial ice is now under discussion.

Bad sewerage is making Salem, Mass., almost uninhabitable, the stench on Sunday causing many acute attacks of nausea.

Eggs to be used under setting hens which come from a distance should be allowed to remain undisturbed for three days before being placed in a nest.

The weekly purchases of bonds by the United States Treasury will be discontinued for the present on account of demands on the cash in the Treasury for other purposes.

Small pox is raging in Paris, and in order to induce the lower classes to have their children vaccinated three francs is given for each child which is brought to the dispensary.

Wheat harvesting is nearly completed in Southern Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, and the yield is fully up to the expectations of the farmers. The weather has been very favorable for harvesting.

An epidemic, exactly resembling that at Adams, Mass., attacked forty workmen in the Brown Cotton-gin works at New London, Conn., Thursday and Friday. Its symptoms are the same, and its cause is as mysterious, the water which the men drank not affecting a family which used it constantly.

Work is actually progressing on the tunnel which is to connect France and England. One shaft has been sunk to the stratum in which the tunnel is to be cut, while another is to be sunk and the machinery for boring under the channel set in operation. The work is expected to be finished in two or three years.

The Comptroller of the Currency warns persons not to receive $100 notes purporting to have been issued by the National Revere Bank of Boston, Pittsburgh National Bank, Mechanics' National Bank of New Bedford, Pittsfield National Bank of Pittsfield, Mass., and National Exchange Bank of Baltimore. It is supposed that these counterfeits are the work of the notorious Charles Ulrich, a German engraver of great skill, who served ten years in the Columbus (O.) Penitentiary for counterfeiting $100 bank notes in 1866.

RIGHTS OF PASSENGERS.

As there seems to be a good deal of trouble between the traveling public and common carriers of late in regard to the privilege of "stopping over" and other privileges, we present some of the principles which have been held by courts in such matters.

In the first place, in the purchase of tickets, it has been held a reasonable regulation for a railroad to make a discrimination of five cents against those who do not purchase tickets before entering the cars. (Hilliard against Gould, 34 N. H., 1856; Jeffersonville railroad against Rogers, 28 Ind., 1867.) A passenger who refuses to pay the extra fare demanded may be ejected, unless the opportunity to purchase a ticket was denied, in which case the company becomes liable for damages from ejectment. (Illinois Central against Sutton, 42 Ill., 1867.) The conductor cannot, however, take the fare and eject the passenger for non-payment of the extra charge, without returning the fare already received. (Dr. Laurens against St. Paul and Pacific, 15 Minn., 1870.) but it was decided in a suit against the New London Northern railroad that a passenger who had found the ticket-office closed and who tendered the published fare, 50 cents, and refused to pay 55 cents, had no claim upon the carrier for passage at the lower rate. It was held that the published rate of fare was "not a contract but a mere proposal which might be withdrawn at pleasure" and was withdrawn when the ticket-office was closed. (Crocker against New London Northern, 21 Ct., 1855.) This ruling, it will be observed, is directly opposite to the Illinois decision cited above and is very much worse law.

As to ejectment for stopping over, the most satisfactory decision we have seen is that in a South Carolina case. A passenger traveling from New York to Savannah had the coupons of his ticket detached from point to point, and received a conductor's check good for that trip only. He stopped over at Columbia, his check was refused by the conductor of the next train, fare demanded, and he was ejected for non-payment. Held that the ejection was wrongful and that the defendant was liable. (Palmer against Charlotte railroad, 3 S. C., 1872.) The Maryland courts have decided directly opposite that the passenger has no right to stop over and travel by subsequent train after having accepted a conductor's check "good for this day only." (McClure against Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore, 34 Md., 1871.) That a ticket should be dated the day of sale and should only entitle the holder to passage on that date, or for such time as would enable the holder to reach his destination, is not unreasonable. (Johnson against Concord railroad, 46 N. H., 1866.) The Illinois and Vermont courts hold that persons can only be ejected from trains at the usual stopping places, but the former adds that they may be removed anywhere for any violation of rules other than the non-payment of fare. All agree that the carrier becomes liable for negligence or unnecessary violence in such removal.

These citations indicate that railroad law is "mighty unsettled," and should lead people to think twice before making a fight on a corporation.

General Hancock's father, Mr. H. H. Hancock, of Norristown, Pa., is said to have been a large, handsome, resolute man, a good lawyer, a Baptist deacon, and a Democrat of the deepest dye. Mrs. Hancock was a gentle little lady, and their three boys were highly esteemed. The Cleveland Leader adds, "They lived in a brick house of modest pretensions, in one part of which Mr. Hancock had his law office, and in another part of which Mrs. Hancock conducted a millinery shop. As a boy General Hancock was a large, fine-looking person, a little clumsy yet well proportioned, a lover of athletic sports and pranks, and a favorite among his acquaintances. He was not remarkably brilliant in his studies, but was a good average scholar. He was selected for appointment to West Point, because of his manliness of character and fine physique, and because he was thought to possess the elements of a soldier."

"My daughter, never tell any one your private affairs," said a mother in sending her daughter away upon her first journey. "Monsieur, a third-class ticket, if you please," said the daughter at the ticket office. "For where?" asked the employe. "Is that any of your business?" answered ma ferocious, indignantly, remembering her mother's advice.

There is no sweetness in a kiss,
Unless your teeth are just like pearls,
Then would you share its trembling bliss,
Use SOZODONT at once, sweet girls:
For it alone gives to the mouth,
White teeth and fragrance of the South.

THE WATER QUESTION.

On Wednesday, July 14, the taxpayers of this city will be called upon by their votes to decide in regard to the acceptance or rejection of the proposition to supply the city with hydrants, water, &c., as submitted by Mr. George H. Norman. The proposition and the action of the City Council upon the same was announced in the telegraphic columns of the Herald on Wednesday last. It is generally considered that the City Fathers acted wisely in giving the people an opportunity to vote upon the important question. The taxpayers are very much interested in the subject. But few persons are found who are willing, for the present at least, to believe that it would be for the best interests of the city to purchase the works. The majority of the voters contend that Mr. Norman's proposition is not equitable one, and as they are not in favor of purchasing the works and their appurtenances when they can have the benefit of the same without the necessity of incurring a heavy debt, it is reasonable to suppose that the proposition will be carried by an overwhelming majority. The day has not arrived when the conservative element of Newport is willing to have the city saddled with an enormous debt when it can have all the hydrants and water necessary for an amount not to exceed $300 per annum.—[N. Y. Herald, June 28.

THE COST OF THE WAR.

War is very expensive in men, morals and money. We can count the men sacrificed, the money spent at least approximately, but the cost in demoralization can only be guessed at. On the 10th inst. the Secretary of the Treasury forwarded to the Senate a statement of the expenses incurred by the United States in the war of the rebellion, which also specified the amount paid on the principal of the public debt thereby incurred. The statement of expenses growing out of the war from seventh month 1, 1861, to sixth month 30, 1879, inclusive, amounts in gross expenditures to $6,790,792,586, ordinary expenditures $600,540,123,02, specific expenditures of the war $6,157,214,585. The statement was made in response to a Senate resolution.—[Messenger of Peace.

Sunday morning Brown told his wife that he did not feel able to go to church, but that she might take the children and go, while he would see if he couldn't walk off the deathly feelings that came over him. The program was carried out, and Brown came home feeling very much better; but now his wife is anxious to know why he had four angle worms in his coat pocket. Some women make themselves disagreeable by being so inquisitive.—[Boston Globe.

The polo season has ended with the city clubs, and the sport has, so far, been indulged in without any serious accident. The Newport belles may save their sympathy till the ponies and riders begin to show off down there, for it is dangerous for the player to forget the horse and an opponent's mallet in his anxiety to win glances for the lady who lets upon him.—[Ex.

Pierre Lorillard backed his horse Uncas to win at Coney Island on Saturday to the extent of $5,000 against $6,000. The race was won by Gleamore.

EMULSION
COD LIVER OIL!
WITH
Pepsine and Quinine
CASWELL, MASSEY & CO.

offer this preparation of Cod Liver Oil to the profession, in the confident hope that it will supply a pleasant and efficient medium of a long lacking but desirable remedy.

It is unnecessary at this date to refer to the very high character which has been borne by the Caswell Cod Liver Oil: suffice it for introduction; it is sufficient to state that the oil used in this new preparation.

The proportion of oil held in the emulsion is fifty per cent.; the purest Turkey from Aralio and the purest White Sugar are the other ingredients employed in its manufacture.

The addition of Pepsine and Quinine is made with the view of enabling the most delicate stomach to retain and digest the oil.

None Genuine unless Bearing the Signature of the Proprietors.

Professor of Greek, who is out riding with his wife, notices that the horse is thirsty and drives into a stream by the roadside; Professor remarks that there is evidently some weighty obstruction which prevents the horse from getting his head down to drink, and says that he will make observations with a view of detecting the difficulty. Suddenly he exclaims, "Ah! I perceive; and proceeds to unbuckle the crupper.—[New York Observer.

Boy—"Mother sent these cherries to you, Mis' Smith." Mrs. Smith—"Oh, thank you, darling! But isn't your mother afraid she'll rob herself?" Boy—"I rather guess not, mum; she said she saw they was all spilin' on the tree and wouldn'll be good for nothin' but swill by tomorrer. So she said bring you some, mum; you might as well have 'em as the hogs." Mrs. Smith—"Your dear mother is so thoughtful." But she doesn't eat any of those cherries. The pioneer in the movement for the introduction of migratory quail into this country was Judge Evarts, of Rutland, Vermont. The Judge is happy just now because of the undoubted practical success of the theory which for several years he advocated before inducing any one to aid him in demonstrating its correctness. For several days now the quail which was turned loose last season in Rutland and vicinity have been heard in the woods apparently in the precise localities where they gained their freedom in this country. The experiment, or "theory," as Judge Evarts always calls it, having proved successful in Vermont we shall naturally look for a good report from Maine and New Hampshire, where the sportsmen have recently got economic fifteen hundred Messina quail. The quail is a bird that the host lives never despise, and it is to be hoped the family will like here well enough to remain for all time.

LOVELY COMPLEXIONS

POSSIBLE TO ALL.

What Nature denies to many Art secures to all. Hagan's Magnolia Balm dispels every blemish, overcomes Redness, Freckles, Sallowness, Roughness, Tan, Eruptions and Blotches, and removes all evidences of heat and excitement. The Magnolia Balm imparts the most delicate and natural complexional tints—no detection being possible to the closest observation.

Under these circumstances a faulty complexion is little short of a crime. Magnolia Balm sold everywhere. Costs only 75 cents, with full directions.
